

He should hear the outrage of the American Jewish community, angry that 115 people were murdered by these bombings, the worst act committed against Diaspora Jews since the Holocaust.

Most important, however, President Menem should see how Americans deal with terrorists who kill in our country. We use all available resources to track down these cowardly murderers. Americans would never stand for such incessant delays in bringing them to trial.

I understand that by mentioning these tragedies, I am bringing to his attention some of the unpleasant realities that exist in Argentina. It would be much easier for President Menem to turn a blind eye to the problems of terrorists and Neo-Nazism in his country.

But, President, Menem, you need to hear that the world will continue to look at Argentina with a jaundiced eye until there is action in this case.

You need to hear that anti-semitism is unacceptable in a democracy.

And you need to hear that we will not rest until justice is served.

Listen, carefully, President Menem. We hope we are heard.

REMEMBERING THE JAPANESE-AMERICAN INTERNMENT

HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 11, 1998

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, we have always prided ourselves in being one Nation, one people. The United States is truly a country composed of immigrants, and the great attraction continues to be the hope of a better life in this dynamic land. However, February 19 represents the tragic betrayal of that American dream to a group of Americans singled out for their race. On February 19, 1942, President Franklin Roosevelt issued Executive Order 9066 which authorized the relocation and incarceration of thousands of Americans of Japanese descent in camps all over the United States.

After the American declaration of war against Japan, Executive Order 9066 went into effect. Japanese-American families endured terrible living conditions under these camps administered by an organization called the War Relocation Authority. Food shortages, cramped, communal living quarters and lack of sanitation facilities were only a few of the hardships. Although Japanese-Americans were later allowed, and sometimes forced, to enlist in the American military service, they were paid sub-level wages and fought for a country which imprisoned their families. Some courageous Japanese-Americans legally challenged the executive order; however, the Supreme Court upheld its validity.

On December 17, 1944, President Roosevelt revoked Executive Order 9066 and Japanese-Americans were allowed to return home. Many families were forced to start their lives from scratch. Although the American Evacuation Claims Act of 1948 was supposed to compensate Japanese-Americans, less than 10% were paid in property losses of over 26,500 claims. On August 10, 1988, President Reagan issued an apology and offered restitution for those who survived the camps. However, half of the 120,000 incarcerated Japanese-Americans died even before the bill was signed into law.

Japanese-American imprisonment in the 1940's is a tragic episode in American history which cannot be repeated. February 19, is a fateful day and should remind us of the lessons learned from Executive Order 9066. The racial connotations attributed to that order resulted in the mass betrayal of thousands of Americans who were constantly moved to exhibit their loyalties to the United States.

In 1998, there are those who have not even heard of the Japanese-American internment. We must educate our constituents on the importance of this day. I am happy to note that the Museum of American History has provided an extensive exhibit on this subject. I encourage my colleagues to view this exhibit. As Americans, we owe it to our constituents to educate ourselves about this terrible and unfortunate experience in our history.

IN HONOR OF REP. RONALD V. DELLUMS

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 11, 1998

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, Rep. Ronald V. Dellums leaves the House of Representatives after twenty-six years of dedicated service to the people of California's ninth district and to all Americans. His unyielding determination and leadership curbed military spending and aided the reserve of the nuclear arms race. His resolution for change led him to develop alternative agendas and budgets to take the burden of the Cold War off the next generation. Investment in education, economic development and the reinstatement of a progressive tax base were his weapons. Dellums' desire for justice for all, shadowed his support of the 1991 Civil Rights Restoration Act, the reauthorization of the 1967 Voting Rights Act and for reparations for Japanese-Americans interned in concentration camps during World War II. His intensity for justice did not stop on the shores of America. In 1971, Rep. Dellums was the first to introduce legislation for economic sanctions against the racist apartheid regime of South Africa. Fifteen years later his bill passed the House, leading to the imposition of sanctions. South Africa is now free.

What do you say to a man who has devoted his career to justice and peace? You say . . . Thank you, Mr. Dellums. Thank you for standing tall against the forces that be. Thank you for being independent and outspoken. Thank you for supporting what was always the greater good.

The retirement of Rep. Ronald V. Dellums will be a great loss in the halls of Congress, but his legacy of peace will live on.

Andre's stellar achievements go above baseball. He is a wonderful role model for our young people because of his deep religious faith and his commitment to family and community. He has worked tirelessly through fundraising events to raise money for childrens' benefits and making appearances on behalf of childrens' causes. He devotes much of his time to the Jimmy Ryce Foundation, a foundation formed to find missing children, and he has raised money for Alzheimer's disease research. He also has a private Andre Dawson Foundation, which is dedicated to helping the needy.

Andre is truly deserving of his upcoming honor. He has been blessed with a great talent, a compassionate heart, and a passion for helping his fellow man. We have been blessed to have Andre Dawson as our hero on and off the field.
